

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A technique for remotely configuring a computing device via a network. A device configuration system is provided to determine a network address of the computing device, to identify the computing device, and to facilitate network configuration of the computing device.

5 The device configuration system also may include a remote interface and a remote device information system.